   The Womens Career Acceleration and Leadership Strategy (WCALS), launched at the University of Sydney in 2015, was designed to increase female representation at leadership levels across all areas of the University. We also seek to promote gender equity across all stages of the career life-cycle through our participation in the Science in Australia Gender Equity (SAGE) program, for which we currently hold a Bronze Award Status (currently the only level available in Australia), and we aspire to achieve Silver by 2025, and ongoing participation in the Champions of Change Coalition (CCC) program of work. We recognise the challenges faced by people with diverse genders and seek to build workplace inclusion via our participation in the Australian Workplace Equality Index (AWEI) for which we currently hold Gold status.

   The Senate is currently comprised of 46.67% female members. While there is no formal strategy or target implemented to increase the representation of women on Senate, there are a number of mechanisms in Senate processes to encourage the representation of women at the University's highest governing body, as outlined below. Elections: The Senate has a total of five elected positions comprised of three staff-elected, and two student-elected positions. The appointment to these positions is determined by the electorate through a vote, and the elections procedures are governed by the University of Sydney By-law 1999. The call for nominations ahead of every election is widely publicised to ensure diversity and wide representation. Staff nominations are advertised through All-Staff News channels, staff networks and committees. Student nominations are advertised through the Student News (an e-newsletter released to all students), student bodies and consultative channels. Skills Matrix: The Senate has two Ministerially-appointed positions, and five Senate-appointed positions. Skills of appointed members of Senate are assessed against the Senate Fellows Skills Matrix, which are key skills and attributes relevant to the functions exercisable by Senate. Of these skills and attributes, one concerns the attribute Contributes to Diversity – Cultural and linguistic, gender, and age diversity, which reflects the view of Senate of the importance of diversity in membership composition. Gender Diversity in Ministerial-appointment nominations: When nominating candidates for consideration by the Minister for Skills, TAFE and Tertiary Education for a Ministerial-appointment position, Senate takes into consideration the gender balance of the field of candidates in addition to each candidate’s skills matrix.

   Our parental leave provisions support staff of all genders and without discrimination to same sex couples. Our provisions enable staff to access a range of benefits in a flexible way, including shared leave arrangements when both parents work at the University, to suit individual family needs, and we strive to support our people to balance family commitments with their career aspirations and interests. Our leave entitlements for a birth mother/adoptive/surrogate are paid based on the length of time a person has worked at the University: 1 week on full pay, or 2 weeks on half pay, per completed month of paid service for people who have worked less than a year. 14 weeks on full pay or 28 weeks on half pay for staff who have worked more than 1 year but less than 2 years. All primary caregivers, irrespective of gender, are entitled to 22 weeks at full pay or 38 weeks at 60 percent of salary for staff who have worked over 2 years.
