

A Veterinary Clinical Residency position is currently available at the Sydney School of Veterinary Science (Camperdown)

The Sydney School of Veterinary Science is currently recruiting for a specialty resident in Veterinary Pathology, commencing on 19th July 2021.

This three-year, full-time program is structured with the objective of training highly skilled veterinary pathologists, ideal for a motivated team player with high level communication skills interested in contributing to our program both through hands-on laboratory activities and through the instruction of veterinary undergraduates and interns. The successful applicant will be part of the SSVS Pathology team who is motivated by their unified purpose of continuous growth of the veterinary profession.

This position will provide advanced training in the field of Veterinary Pathology. Resident activities will include performing necropsies on domestic animals and wildlife species, histopathological interpretation of tissues from necropsy cases and surgical biopsy submissions, pathology reporting, and conducting haematology, biochemistry, microbiology, parasitology testing and analyses.

The program is expected to enable the successful applicant to fulfil the credentialing requirements for Membership of the Australian and New Zealand College of Veterinary Scientists and work towards the American College of Veterinary Pathology board exam (ACVP). The residency program is directly supervised by board-certified specialists. This program requires completion of concurrent Masters degrees in coursework and research. A tax-free stipend of $44,000 pa is available for the most outstanding applicant. The position will be primarily based at the University of Sydney Camperdown Campus. Rotations between the Camperdown and Camden campuses are expected.

Interviews will occur shortly afterwards.

Applications are restricted to veterinarians with a registrable degree in New South Wales. Candidates must have an Honours degree or equivalent as well as Australian citizenship or Australian permanent residency.
