

18 September 2018

The Pacific Alliance of Music Schools (PAMS) mourns the loss of one of its founding members: The renowned Japanese composer Isao Matsushita died suddenly and unexpectedly on 16 September 2018, aged only 66. He was the Vice-President of the Tokyo University of the Arts.

We are losing a passionate musician and educator, with a unique sense of humour and an enviable love of musical adventure. Many of us have fond memories of spending time with him, watching videos of some of his remarkable projects, or discussing his plans for the 2020 Olympics, where he hoped to bring sports and music together with technology, so that they would celebrate humanity just like in the antique Athens.

What a sad and shocking loss, so close to his retirement and all the fun and productivity it would have given him, his friends and loved ones. He was a remarkable presence, unforgettable as a personality. Isao Matsushita's impact through his music, students, friends and family will be immense, and not silenced by his unexpected passing.

We offer our sincere condolences to those close to him and will keep him in fond memory.

Sharon Choa, Dean, Hong Kong Academy of Performing Arts
Barry Conyngham, Dean, Faculty of VCA & MCM, University of Melbourne
Robert Cutietta, Dean, Thornton School of Music, University of Southern California
Daniel Shien-Ta Su, Dean, School of Music, Taipei National University of the Arts
Anna Reid, Dean, Sydney Conservatorium of Music
Richard Kurth, Director, School of Music, University of British Columbia
Bernard Lanskey, Dean, Yong Siew Toh Conservatory of Music
Shinuh Lee and Jong Hwa Park, College of Music, Seoul National University
Narong Prangcharoen, Dean, College of Music, Mahidol University
Martin Rummel, Head of School, School of Music, University of Auckland
David Stull, President, San Francisco Conservatory of Music
Wang Rui, Vice-President, Shanghai Conservatory of Music
Yu Hongmei, Vice-President, Beijing Central Conservatory of Music and all associate PAMS delegates of the above institutions.