

Dr Liliane Mouan, Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights

Biography

Dr Liliane Mouan is a consultant and researcher currently serving as Consultant Economist for Central Africa for the Central Africa Regional Office of the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR-CARO).

Her work lies at the intersection of law, politics and international relations and centres on aspects of international economic law, governance and development. Prior to joining OHCHR-CARO, she served as Lecturer in Emerging Markets at Coventry University and Associate Fellow at the Transnational Law Institute at King's College London, in the United Kingdom (UK).

She has worked as researcher in Business and Human Rights for the British Institute of International and Comparative Law and consulted for Amnesty International, the International Institute for Environment and Development and Transparency International, among others. She is a member of the International Economic Law (IEL) Collective hosted by the University of Warwick, UK.