4. Publishing schedule

Ordinarily quarterly (four times a year):

- March (issue no 1)
- June (issue no 2)
- September (issue no 3)
- December (issue no 4)

We also publish online advance access versions of some content on the Sydney Law Review Advance Access \(Forthcoming Issues\) webpage.

5. Sydney Law Review Open Access Policy

- The Sydney Law Review supports open access. All articles published in the Review appear free of charge on AustLII and a PDF of the latest issue is available on the homepage of the Sydney Law Review website.
- In accordance with the Review's Publication Agreement, authors may reproduce and communicate their published article to the public, on condition that: the Author does not charge a fee or other valuable consideration and such reproduction or communication includes an acknowledgement that the article was first published in the Review and provides full publication citation details (namely: author, article title, year of publication, volume number, issue number and Journal title [Sydney Law Review].)
- To facilitate the double-blind refereeing process, the Review requires submitters to remove any draft manuscripts from publicly accessible sources during the review process.

6. Archiving

Sydney Law Review content is archived on AustLII from its first year of publication (1953).

7. Author fees

There are no fees or charges for manuscript processing and/or publishing materials in the journal.

8. Peer review process

- Submissions are first assessed by the Editors and, if considered suitable, will be sent for double-blind peer review by reviewers that are expert in the field.
- All submissions approved to go out for peer review are subject to at least two double-blind reviews. In the event that the Review is unable to secure two double-blind peer reviews due to the nature of the field/topic or any other reason, we will ensure one double-blind peer review and at least one other anonymous peer review.
- The submission and the reviews are then considered by the Editorial Board, which makes the final decision regarding publication. In some cases, this process may involve re-submission and re-review.
- The review process (for submissions approved to go out for peer review) usually takes 8–12 weeks, after which the authors are notified of the Board's decision. Please be aware that there may be delays due to late reviews and/or holiday periods.

- The Review's policy is to keep the identity of referees and authors confidential. Referee comments are provided (anonymously) to the author(s).
- Where an author has been invited to revise and resubmit their submission, the revised submission will be reviewed before the Board makes a final decision and this may mean that the revised submission is reviewed by a new reviewer and/or the original reviewer/s.

9. Authorship and Acknowledgements

- All parties who have made a substantive contribution to the article should be listed as authors.
- All contributors who do not meet the criteria for authorship should be listed in an acknowledgement at the end of the author biography footnote.

10. Copyright

- The author retains copyright in the Work and grants the Review an exclusive licence to publish the Work according to the terms of the Review's Publication Agreement.
- All revenue, Copyright Agency payments and royalties from the published Work are retained by the Review.

11. Identification of and dealing with allegations of research misconduct

- The Editors shall take reasonable steps to identify and prevent the publication of manuscripts where research misconduct has occurred, including plagiarism, citation manipulation, and data falsification/fabrication. All authors of submissions to the Sydney Law Review authorise the Review to use duplication-checking software.
- In the event that the Review Editors and/or Editorial Board are made aware of any allegation of research misconduct relating to a submission to, or published article in, the Sydney Law Review shall follow the Committee on Publication Ethics ('COPE') guidelines (or equivalent) in dealing with allegations.

12. Conflicts of interest of editors, authors, and reviewers.

- Sydney Law Review requires its Editorial Board members (including the Editors) to declare any conflicting interests and to exclude themselves from any discussion and decision-making concerning submissions in relation to which they do or may be considered to have a conflict.
- Sydney Law Review requires authors to include a declaration of any conflicting interests at the end of the author biography footnote.
- Sydney Law Review requires reviewers to declare any actual or possible conflicting interests as soon as apparent to them.
